HELENA, N.Y. (AP)-An 11-year-old boy, WIRE BRIEFS who rescued five of his brothers and sisters from their burning home, died today with a younger sister when he returned to the house to try to save her.

Killed were Thomas Fregoe and his sister, Jeannie, 2, children of Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Fregoe.

Mrs. Fregoe and two of her sons, aged two and three months, were taken to Massena Memorial Hospital, near this northern New York hamlet, for treatment of burns. Three other Fregoe children escaped without Firemen said the fire apparently broke out in the kitchen of the two-storey frame house shortly after Fregoe had left for work at a metal plant.

Mrs. Fregoe discovered the fire, and ran to a neighbor's home to summon help. Meanwhile, Thomas herded five of the children from the burn-When he discovered Jeannie had not reached safety, neighbors said, he ran back in.

SHORT OF A MINOR MIRACLE, the provincial government's new assessment policy, reflected in notices mailed in recent days, means higher taxes for home-owners in Greater Victoria and other parts of British Columbia

The minor miracle which could avert the heavier charge on homes would be a reduction in municipal mill rates. When municipalities are crying for more financial assistance from the province - and receiving none - expectations of tax rate cuts carry more hope than realism.

Mr. Bennett, denying muni-cipalities the relief they seek, has, through higher assessments, offered them a means by which they can maintain the fiction of "holding the line" by not increasing mill rates. The offer seems almost irresistible. Mr. Bennett has not specifically invited a raid, but he has opened the back door of the municipal taxpayers' home.

The new policy calls for assess-ments based on the sales value of property, with heavy emphasis on residential land. Sales prices at present are high. Assessments are high correspondingly.

While land values for taxation purposes have been generally raised, the argument is advanced that reductions have been made on some improvements. In such cases, this will modify the increases in the individual's municipal taxes on his house and lot together. But where the formula lowers the assessment on a house, it is merely easing down fractionally the high assessments placed on new construction up to a year or two ago and applied to older houses last year.

In Victoria itself a particular difficulty arises. Assessments have been reduced on certain downtown property for which there is no market. As the city's tax potential is thereby reduced, the residential districts will have to take up the slack to maintain city revenues equal to those of 1961.

Where, in other municipalities, the total assessment has been in-creased, the municipalities will have cess to more revenue — which eans they will collect more taxes from the public — if they even maintain the mill rate of last year.

In the unorganized districts the same general principle applies. Where demand for property sends the price of land up, the rise will reflected in assessments. Summunity are only too familiar with 3 the way their taxes have risen in recent years. They can look forward to more of the same.

While figures for the last two years are not available, a striking of the mosses, hunting for beetles and other insects. Close by, waiting for a free feed, there are sure to be several Robins. They watch, suddenly dart in to pick up something that has been uncovered, then away they go.

Home-owners are not worried as with Portugal over Goa and Indonesia's such over the figures in a mill They are worried about the amount taken from them.

There may very well be some parts of British Columbia where land is cheap, where there is no demand for building sites. The problem confronting the man who owns his home is clearly indicated. But the problem does not end there. During the Twelve Days of Christmas I have been amusing myself with two admirable books about eating; one is Vogue's French Cookery Book, by Madame Cosette Vogel de Brunhoff; the other is Physiology of the Digestive Tract, by Dr. Horace Davenport, who is president of the American Physiological Society. Her publishers say that Madame de Brunhoff's table is "the talk of Paris," and she certainly seems to know a lot about the human digestion; I am proud to claim Dr. Davenport as an old friend, and from personal experience with my feet under his table I know that he is an excellent chef.

Unlikely Males Shine

For Broadway Patrons

NEW YORK (NEA) —Matinee idols of yester-year more likely in the hero role must be stomping their celestial stage with devilish than the twin stars of Broadrage. For a new season has dawned in the Broadway way's latest smash hit. The theatre and brought with it the most unlikely set of one with the title that reads theatre and brought with it the most unlikely set of leading men ever to tread the hallowed boards.

Theatre goers have their choice among these male stars:

A sawed off runt with what one critic called "the shy smile of a subservient chipmunk."

An average retired crooner.

of a lovable Scottish lunkhead—now cast as a lovable Greek cook.

A bald brash and bespectacled fugitive from Minsky's burlesque.

George Gobel —no point in describing him any other way. George Gobel.

To describe Gobel as a "leading man" is at once a contradiction in terms. Gobel was cut out by his diminutive size, choir boy voice and shy gestures to be a following man. Yet, he is what must pass, in the absence of any more luminous personality, as the star of "Let It Ride," a musical based on the hardy perennial of stage and screen, "Three Men on a Horse." And from the long lines at the box office George would probably say. "I seem to be pretty luminous myself. That I do."

Like Gobel, the aforementioned bald and brash one is completely believable in the part of a brassy little runt who worms his way to the top in business with the aid of a pocket manual entitled "How to Succeed..." "etc., etc. Nobody could be so unadulteratedly treacher ou s, venal, selfish and egotistical. Like Gobel, the aforementioned bald and brash one is suited that a matinee ido must be dashing, debonair resonant of voice, slim of tail the audience returns his vapid grin and be-LIEVES in him.

College musclemen who plan to go digging for gold and glory in pro football are getting a lot of headlines these days. But the scholars who rate the highest grades for athletic astuteness might be the ones who are quietly polishing their talents in tenpin palaces.

It's big business this bowling. And this could be the year that the booming pastime of scattering hardwood sticks achieves recognized status as a major league sport.

Every year the money and prestige in bowling has been getting bigger and bigger. You can find a flock of keglers who collect better than $25,000 a year and point out a few who have a chance to top a hundred grand.

Only the greatest grid stars have a chance of cracking the 25G circle and a guy has to be rock-ribbed and lucky to ast more than half a dozen years in the violent world of bro football. But a bowler can plan for a career of 20 or nore years. And how often do you run into a howler uffering the miseries of torn ligaments, shoulder separa-ions and crushed cartilages?

However, there's always that proverbial fly in the ointment. The insect in the maple medicine is that competi-tion gets tougher and tougher as the continent's fastestgrowing participant sport blossoms into a get-rich-quick benefit for the better performers. You have to be one of the best to get out of the hamburger income bracket.

The current climb in bowling's bull market finds half a million dollars up for grabs on the Professional Bowlers' Association 1962 winter circuit. All the top U.S. keglers are competing in the 16-city tour that started last monh in Chicago and winds up in late April at Las Vegas, Nev.

Ray Bluth, a master strategist and one of the most painstaking students of the game, recently summed up the situation from the bowler's viewpoint.

"A few years ago an average between 200 and 205 would win money on a tour like this," he said. "Now there are so many good bowlers coming along and conditions have im-proved so greatly it usually takes at least 212 to get into the money at all."

Ray is in there trying, along with other lane leaders such as Don Carter, Pat Patterson, Dick Weber and other

Windup of every three-day tournament will be carried on a coast-to-coast felevision series that started today, reaching Victoria by way of Channel 4 this afternoon at 4.30. Eliminations reduce the field to four trundlers for the semifinals and finals, which will be on the microwaves for 90

There is prize money for 32 bowlers each week. The winners can take home as much as $7,500 from Las Vegas to as little as $4,000 from Puerto Rico and Chicago. Elsewhere the top prize is listed as $5,000, which isn't a had pickup even for guys like Carter, Bluth and Weber, whose take-home pay runs high into five figures in a mediocre year and into six when pins fall right.

Bowling has come a long way from the days when many considered it almost a pastime for delinquents and when a shirt or box of cheap cheroots was a whopping prize.

CURLING KIBITZING: Although he lost a 10-8 decision Friday night to Ken Sturfock, and with full respect for the talents of contenders from Esquimalt and clubs further forth, the feeling here is that Tony Gutoski, who tonight faces Sturrock in the deciding game of the Victoria Curling Club playdowns, is a mighty good bet to collect another Island rock-tossing crown.

For additional support of the theory, listen to one of Gutoski's own men. "Tony's really curling well," says second Gord Robertson. "He's the Gutoski of old."

Gord could be accused of partiality, but watching Gutoski you get the feeling that, for a change, he hasn't a care in creation. His shots appear surer and we can't recall ever seeing the lean skip seemingly derive as much enjoyment from the game as he did this week in VCC

Even when he won the provincial championship in 1958 with Gary Leibel, Dale Dalziel and Bill Dunstan, Tony played watching him smile through this week's games with Leibel, Robertson and Danny Martell, Times curling writer Ernie Fedoruk was convinced he saw "a new Gutoski." even better than the Gutoski of old.

CURLING CUES

By MATT BALDWIN

Three-time Canadian Champion

Practise makes perfect, and you have to try to apply this old proverb to curling if you want to win a few bonspiels

Regardless of how proficient you become as a shotmaker, you cannot tune yourself up for a major event without ample practice sessions.

Twenty minutes a day, most days, could suffice, providing you have a worthwhile system of practising. It can sharpen you up where club games or even those swift weekend leagues don't quite finish the job.

Like everything else, there may not be complete agree-ment on the best way to conduct your private workouts. I know some people like to play points, which gives them a wide variety of shots every day.

Personally, I believe that they are on the wrong track. For one thing, I like to practise alone. Who is going to hold the broom for you? Well, you need him like you need to come up light when you have a rock to be disposed of. I pick out a spot on the ice or on the back-boards, and deliver my rock with it serving as the broom.

I concentrate on both broom and weight when I play my first stone. Then I attempt to duplicate it. The same shot should be tried at least four times, and as much as ten times without varying ice and weight.

Same Broom, Weight; Same Result

The secret is that when you duplicate your shot, you know you are curling well. After all, if you use the same troom and weight, the rock should react the same each time. If you do make a mistake, remove the rock, or ignore it, or knock it out of the way with a takeout practice.

The sequence I employ is eight out-turns and eight inturns. Each day you practise, you should vary the spot you use for your broom, as this will help you hit the brush right up the handle at any point on the ice with either turn.

If possible, use ice that has been curled on. The pebble has been worn off, and your rock will react more faithfully than on freshly pebbled ice. On new ice, any straying from the broom can be misleading, especially for weight because your stone is passing over ice that has not been used. * * *

If you wish, you may have someone hold the broom for you, but do not let him give you a variety of shots. Because you do not know the ice, you undoubtedly will become completely confused. It will come down to a guessing game for

It would defeat the real purpose of your practising, and you would be doing yourself as much good in a club

Consider the case of John Mika, whose by-line you see over stories emanating from Victoria's City Hall, and whose goats, chickens, bees, dogs, cat and horse you can see on the four acres out Prospect Lake way he calls home.

City-born (Oshawa, Ont., 1930), city-bred (Toronto), he headed for the really big one, London, Eng., where he arrived with five dollars in his pocket. This didn't last long, but young John managed to scrape together enough shillings and pence to head back across the Atlantic a year later, and presumably

His intention was to pursue higher learning at the University of Western Ontario, but lack of money reared its ugly head, and he became a cub reporter with the intention of making a grubstake and going back to

Somewhat to his surprise, Mika found newspape ing to his liking, and in due time landed a senior job with the Regina Leader-Post.

, There his joy was increased by meeting and marrying a charming prairie flower, name of Peggy, who finally agreed—after four winters—that life could be beautiful, somewhere else.

Thus John and Peggy, complete with pet budgie (their only livestock at the time) moved to Victoria, he to take up duties with The Times, she to cast her eye around for a suitable farming site.

This would be five years ago. Since then, Mika has gone through his apprenticeship on the various beats the city editor tosses at newcomers, is now once more, as City Hall reporter, a fully-accredited city slicker.

During working hours, he scoops up the news at City Hall. Meanwhile, back at the barn . . .

Leading Canadian Novelist Says Science Can Keep Peace

If scientists can produce the means to destroy mankind they can also produce the means to save it.

This is not wishful thinking-it is commonsense in the opinion of Ralph Allen, distinguished Canadian writer and contributing editor of Maclean's Magazine, who is now in Victoria on a reporting

Nearly three years ago, quiet-spoken Mr. Allen created a national controversy by proposing that Cahada should disarm. He said the country was obsolete as a military nation and should strive for peace with foreign aid instead of arms.

"Disarmament is our best and only ultimate hope of survival," he declared.

VIEW STILL STANDS

Today, in retrospect, Mr. Allen stands by this view and says the opposition to it was "not nearly as fierce as I expected."

He has written an article for Maclean's on Dr. Norman Alcock, founder of the Peace Research Institute, who believes in a scientific appoach to the causes of war.

"Dr. Alcock is especially concerned with the social attitudes which build up to war," Mr. Allen said, "and I have tried to interpret his theories in my article." His main purpose in coming to Victoria was to interview Premier Bennett and it seems the premier gave him full value.

Continuing survey of the badly damaged Greek freighter Giafkos indicates it is unlikely she will be re-paired, it was learned unofficially today.

In addition to a long, jagged hole in her bottom plates, the ship suffered other damage in engine and boiler room from the pounding she took on the rocks at the entrance to Barkley Sound.

A jury of representatives of the owners and insurance company is expected to bring in a verdict Monday.

The ship was hauled off the rocks after a tense battle by the tugs Sudbury and Challenger and will likely find a shipbreaker's yard at the end of her next tow.

The ship was built in Sorel, Quebec, 18 years ago, as Ss. Algonquin Park and served from 1943 to the end of the Second World War on Atlantic convoy duties. At that time she was owned by the Canadian government, on charter to Britain.

Power Report May Backfire

By FRANK RUTTER Times Legislative Reporter

The ballyhooed "real lowdown" on the Columbia River At least according to Ottawa politicians it is the real stuff; they also got the northern affairs department to go along with

They commissioned the Montreal Engineering Company, a highly respected outfit, to prepare an analysis of the Columbia costs. This job took 66 days, March 10 to May 15.

They say this analysis—two volumes of graphs and text—proves the Ottawa policy for the Columbia is right, and Premier Bennett's is wrong.

And in a moment of mental aberra-

And in a moment of mental aberration they released the report to the press to back their arguments.

Unfortunately for them, if the report does anything to clear the Columbia air, it only tends to prove them wrong, and Premier Bennett right.

Ottawa's chief power spokesman, Justice Minister E. Davie Fulton, has used the report in his fight with the premier over sale of Canadian power to the U.S. Yet the report clearly shows that Canadian power even if it is only from the Columbia alone—has got to be sold somewhere else than in B.C., whether it's to the U.S. or Venezuela, or else wasted.

Mr. Fulton has used the report to say that the Columbia downstream benefits—power available in the Columbia downstream benefits—power available in the U.S. as a result of Canadian control over the river's flow can be returned to B.C. and sold for 3.6 mills, cheaper than any other type of power here.

And yet the report does everything it can to shoot down its own 3.6-mill figure by showing it could by several factors be inflated to way over 5 mills.

Mr. Fulton has used the report to say that Peace River power is a poor deal all-around when compared to Columbia power.

And yet the report does not mention the word Peace anywhere, and, in fact comes up with power cost figures higher than those estimated in this province for the Peace. Quite apart from that the methods of calculating Columbia costs are so different from those used by the B.C. Energy Board (which did make direct comparisons) that it is impossible to relate the two studies. * * * At almost every stage the Montreal report—no doubt a sincere and honest piece of work—appears to defeat the very arguments Ottawa hoped it would prove.

The two most damning statements:

1. While a "theoretical" cost of Columbia power for development of the complete system is 4.3 milis, the "practical" wholesale selling price would be 5.4 mills per kilowatt hour.

kilowatt hour.

2. "A large amount of power may become available before it can be absorbed by the market."

The first point is based upon rather obscure reasoning.

which attempts to show that in order to avoid operating at a loss a public utility must add a substantial sum to its wholesale price to cover business risks and contingency The second is commonsense and well illustated by

The second is commonsense and well illustated by graphs in the report showing hefty surpluses of Columbia power—even during the years when downstream benefits will be the only power created by the project. Some of these surpluses, the report presumes, will be sold at 2.5 mills as "fuel replacement" to the used at existing B.C. thermal plants making power by burning such other resources as coal.

such other resources as coal.

Even heftier surpluses occur when power is actually produced in Canada from the Columbia at Mica Creek dam.

Yet, the report says, the longer this generation is delayed, the more expensive will be the downstream benefits to B.C. consumers. This is because their cost must bear the charge of building the $288,000,000 dam must bear the charge of building the $288,000,000 dam until it produces its own power and become self-liquidating. It would seem to boil down to a choice of coatlier power or large-lump sale of surpluses.

But Ottawa says it won't allow such sales.

And Premier Bennett says he can sell the power to the U.S. at 5 mills—a tidy subsidy toward reducing power costs in B.C.

And so on it goes. It is in fact, more of a letdown than a lowdown.

Just wait until Premier Bennett gets hold of a copy.

Victoria artist Herbert Siebner will embark next Mon-day on a three-menth lecture tour of British Columbia arranged by the extension department of the University of British Columbia. Travelling mostly by plane, he will give lectures and nduct workshops in towns and cities across the province.

At the same time, he will make sketches of people disaces visited and these will be published each Saturday in The Victoria Daily Times.

Mr. Siebner will return to Victoria three times during tour to give scheduled lectures at Victoria College on Feb. 27, March 13 and April 3.

The UBC tour opens with a week of workshop lectures in the Prince Rusert area starting Monday and will be followed by visits to Vernon, Kelowna, Penticton, Fernie, Cranbrook, Invermere, Creston, Prince George, Powell River and the Gulf Islands.

Mr. Siebner is an enthusiast for the workshop method of instruction by which aspiring artists work together "I shall be working with students of all ages," he said, "but I think the university level is the most important stage of development."

Mr. Siebner concedes that it is never too late to take up art, but doubts whether beginners over 50 can achieve a "full facility." Born at Stettin, near the Baltic coast of Germany, Mr.

Siebner studied at the Atelier Richter School, followed by intensive training at the Berlin Academie under Carl He travelled widely in France and Italy before coming to Canada in 1955. Since then he has exhibited his

Are you finding that activities seem suddenly to have come to an abrupt end? If not that extreme, they have slowed down a great deal and while we breath a sigh of relief we feel a little at loss for something to do.

When I saw these do it yourself Canadian wool skirt and sweater sets I immediately thought of the many long evenings that could be filled by making a new outfit. The set includes hand woven material, two-and-one-eighth yards by 31 inches for a straight skirt and 13 ounces of wool for a sweater.

The hand-woven yardage is available in 20 colors and designs of tweed and plaid and the wool for the sweater is dyed

The hand-woven yardage is available in 20 colors and designs of tweed and plaid and the wool for the sweater is dyed a perfect match for each. This match is achieved by dyeing the fleece and then spinning it into yarn for knitting and weaving. Sound nice? It is, and really quite simple to make up too. Suit weight material and knitting wool is $17.50 a set and coat weight is $18.95.

Novel jewelry containers are another item I've spotted. They are made of taffeta with velveteen lining. Six accordion folding pockets that the with a ribbon are selling for $2 and three pockets for $1.25. Color combinations are pale green and brown, brown and gold, grey and mauve and black

Now you have the case, why not look at these lovely enamel and copper sets. They're made locally and are really stunning. Several shapes and sizes are available, but one especially caught my eye, a fish-shaped brooch and earring set. They are in shades of blue, green and red. The price? Not bad at all, a set is only $4.95.

Call me and I'll tell you where you can find these interest Penny, EV 2-3131.

Milk Precaution

LONDON (CP) — A pre-caution against danger of radioactive iodine in milk is suggested by Dr. O. S. Kohn-stamm in the British Medical Journal. He says the iodine has a radioactive half-life of eight days, and if milk and milk products are kept in the refrigerator for two to three weeks the toxity would be greatly reduced.

He arrived at a fine six-club contract and, after winning the open-ing diamond lead, he paused to study the hand thoroughly. It did not take him very long to see that his only problem was in the trump suit and if trumps were to break any way but 40 he would have a cinch. He also saw that he had a perfect safety play against all four trumps Accordingly, he laid down the jack of clubs. West put on his singleton king and Dr. Jais had to lose a later trump trick that his opponent who did not understand safety plays had not lost.

Pierre reports that a friend told him, "The audience does not understand bridge very well. They laughed when you led the Jack of ciubs."

Pierre's reply was, "I should not have thought so long. Then they would have believed that I was careless."

CLOSER LOOK SUGGESTS HOLED SHIP FINISHED

Continuing survey of the badly damaged Greek freighter Glafkos indicates it is unlikely she will be re-paired, it was learned unofficially today.

In addition to a long, jagged hole in her bottom plates, the ship suffered other damage in engine and boiler room from the pounding she took on the rocks at the entrance to Barkley Sound.

A jury of representatives of the owners and insurance company is expected to bring in a verdict Monday.

The ship was hauled off the rocks after a tense battle by the tugs Sudbury and Challenger and will likely find a shipbreaker's yard at the end of her next tow.

The ship was built in Sorel, Quebec, 18 years ago, as Ss. Algonquin Park and served from 1943 to the end of the Second World War on Atlantic convoy duties. At that time she was owned by the Canadian government charter to Britain.

Power Report May Backfire

Times Legislative Reporter

The ballyhooed "real lowdown" on the Columbia River power project arrived this week.

At least according to Ottawa politicians it is the real stuff; they also got the northern affairs department to go along with

They commissioned the Montreal Engineering Company, a highly respected outfit, to prepare an analysis of the Columbia costs. This job took 66 days, March 10 to May 15.

They say this analysis-two volumes of graphs and text proves the Ottawa policy for the Columbia is right, and premier Bennett's is wrong.

Rutter And in a moment of mental aberrathey released the report to the press to back up

Unfortunately for them, if the report does anything to clear the Columbia air, it only tends to prove them wrong, and Premier Bennetteright. * * *

E. Davie Fulton, has used the report in his fight with the premier over sale of Canadian power to the U.S.

Yet the report clearly shows that Canadian power—even if it is only from the Columbia alone—has got to be sold somewhere else than in B.C., whether it's to the U.S. or Venezuela, or else wasted.

Mr. Fulton has used the report to say that the Columbia downstream benefits—power available in the U.S. as a result of Canadian control over the river's flow—can be returned to B.C. and sold for 3.6 mills, cheaper than any other type of power here. And yet the report does everything it can to shoot down its own 3.6-mill figure by showing it could by several factors be inflated to way over 5 mills.

Mr. Fulton has used the report to say that Peace River power is a poor deal all-around when compared to Columbia power.

And yet the report does not mention the word Peace anywhere, and, in fact comes up with power cost figures higher than those estimated in this province for the Peace. Quite apart from that the methods of calculating Columbia costs are so different from those used by the B.C. Energy Board (which did make direct comparisons) that it is impossible to relate the two studies. * * *

At almost every stage the Montreal report-no doubt a sincere and honest piece of work—appears to defeat the very arguments Ottawa hoped it would prove. The two most damning statements: I. While a "theoretical" cost of Columbia power for development of the complete system is 4.3 mills, the "practical" wholesale selling price would be 5.4 mills per kilowatt bour. kilowatt hour.

2. "A large amount of power may become available before it can be absorbed by the market."

The first point is based upon rather obscure reasoning which attempts to show that in order to avoid operating at a loss a public utility must add a substantial sum to lith wholesale price to cover business risks and contingency reserves. The second is commonsense and well illustated by graphs in the report showing hefty surpluses of Columbia power—even during the years when downstream benefits, will be the only power created by the project. Some of these surpluses, the report presumes, will be sold at 2.5 mills as "fuel replacement" to the used at existing B.C. thermal plants making power by burning such other resources as coal. Even heftier surpluses occur when power is actually produced in Canada from the Columbia at Mica Creek,

Yet, the report says, the longer this generation is delayed, the more expensive will be the downstream benefits to B.C. consumers. This is because their cost must bear the charge of building the $288,000,000 dam until it produces its own power and become self-liquidating. It would seem to boil down to a choice of costller power or large-lump sale of surpluses.

But Ottawa says it won't allow such sales.

But Ottawa says it won't allow such sales, And Premier Bennett says he can sell the power to the U.S. at 5 mills—a tidy subsidy toward reducing power costs in B.C.

And so on it goes.

It is in fact, more of a letdown than a lowdown. Just wait until Premier Bennett gets hold of a copy.

DETROIT (UPI) - Leo Labine, Pete Goegan and Val Fonteyne ended lengthy scoring droughts today with third period goals as Detroit Red Wings skated to a 6-2 matinee victory over the Boston Bruins.

The trio increased the Wings' lead to 6-2 with a threegoal outburst in the first five minutes of the third period to break up a tight contest.

It was Goegan's first goal in 20 games and came at 1.31. Labine followed at 2.23 with his first score in 32 games and at 4.34 Fonteyne ended a famine with the Wings' final goal.

Alex Delvecchio assisted on our of the Wings' goals. The victory was Detroit's eventh in eight afternoon home contests this season and was witnessed by a Boys' Day crowd of 8,118.

FIRST GOAL

Defenceman Warren God-frey got the Wings off to a 10 lead at 7.28 of the first period with his first goal of the season. Andrae Pronovost tied it for Boston at 10.36 of the period but goals by Marcel Pronovost and Gordie Howe in rapid succession put the Wings in front 3-1 as the period ended. period ended.

Jerry Toppazzini narrowed Detroit's lead to 3-2 at 7.29 of the second period with his ninth goal of the season.

Protest March By Thousands

PARIS (Reuters) - Communist demonstrators wearing motorcycle crash helmets as protection against police clubs and rifle butts today marched through Paris streets in defiance of a government ban.

Police blocked streets with trucks for 200 yards around the Communist party head-quarters, the planned focal point of the demonstration.

Several groups of demon-strators shouting "fascism shall not pass" and other slogans approached the road-blocks, but turned off without attempting to force the police cordons.

About 1,000 headed toward the main boulevards of the capital.

A large-scale security oper ation was ordered by the gov-ernment to guard against the Communist demonstration and to rehearse precautions against a possible revolt by right-wing extremists.

About 6,000 Communists took part in today's demon-strations, but they were never able to assemble in one body because police channelled knots of demonstrators in opposite directions.

The demonstration appeared to be dying out late in the day with only a small crowd of demonstrators assembled outside the right-wing newspaper Aurore and a march by a march by a crowd of about 1,000 down the Rue de la Fay ette.

In contrast to last mont when 140 persons were injured in the breaking up of a left-wing protest march against rightist extremists, police today made no attempt to smash the demonstration.
